

Harry Freedman

Customized Corporate Put-On Comedian, Actor, & Emcee

Harry Freedman is an utter fraud—a stand-up comedian whom dozens of companies have asked to pretend he's an industry expert or newly hired executive to bring humor to annual meetings or conventions. Freedman calls his comedy the "put-on" and he has re-energized meetings and events by playing the part of everything from the White House Economic Advisor to a Sports Fitness Doctor to a paleontologist. Freedman starts off for real, but after a few minutes of his outrageous quips, the audience realizes they've been had—and they love it. Completely original and highly customized for your industry, Freedman's "frauds" help facilitate transitions, build teamwork, and revitalize an organization. With more than 30 years of professional comedy experience, you can rest assured Freedman will be a hit with your group.

As a speaker, Harry Freedman has performed for both Fortune 500 and Fortune 1000 companies and has been profiled in the business sections of The New York Times, Miami Herald, Newsday, and the Int'l Herald Tribune. As a put-on comedian, he has appeared on dozens of TV and radio shows, including One on One Sports with Tim Mccarver. As an actor, Freedman has appeared on and written for the hit CBS sitcom, Everybody Loves Raymond. He has also appeared on Stand-up Spotlight, America's Funniest People, Comedy On the Road, and has written for, and appeared on Carolines Comedy Hour and Showtime Comedy Specials.

Freedman carefully screens all of his material directly with the client to ensure that it is tasteful, funny, and right on the mark. He is also a crackerjack emcee, and provides comedic relief to panels and discussions. With Freedman at the mike, information gets across with increased audience retention, and barriers are broken between employees and management. His comedy is a can't miss tool that helps organizations motivate, inspire, and bring out their very best.
