

The Passing Zone

Experts on Teambuilding

Buzzing chainsaws, flaming torches, razor sharp garden tools...these are just a few of the things The Passing Zone is willing--and able--to juggle. Of course, they're too busy staying focused on the dangerous items flying between them, but if John Wee and Owen Morse could look out at their audiences, they'd certainly see thousands of jaws hanging open in disbelief. Combining their years of teamwork, eighteen gold medals from the International Jugglers Association, and 5 Guinness World Records, The Passing Zone are experts in what it takes to solve problems, develop deep trust and communication, and excel at their most dangerous vocation. By interweaving their astounding juggling act with humor, wisdom, and important truths about teamwork and success, The Passing Zone can turn the run-of-the-mill conference into a show an audience will never forget.

The best keynote speakers do a lot more than just present a meaningful and informative message. They act as a springboard to launch your imagination, expand your perception, and open new doors to possibility. The Passing Zone does all this and more. Juggling is the perfect metaphor to describe what people do in their workday and how they balance life's many demands. And these guys know about teamwork, learning from mistakes, and reaching goals. As members of the National Speakers Association, Wee and Morse demonstrate exceptional skills as highly motivational speakers. Add their artistry as jugglers, comedians, and entertainers, and The Passing Zone can turn your next function into the most talked-about and effective event your group has ever experienced.
