

Gurpreet Dhaliwal

Professor of Clinical Medicine at the University of California, San Francisco and Expert on Decision-Making and How People Think

Gurpreet Dhaliwal M.D. is a clinician-educator and Professor of Medicine at the University of California San Francisco.

He sees patients and teaches medical students and residents in the emergency department, inpatient wards, and outpatient clinic at the San Francisco VA Medical Center, where he directs the internal medicine clerkship.

He studies, writes, and speaks about how doctors think – how they make diagnoses, how they develop diagnostic expertise, and what motivates them to improve their practice and the systems in which they work.

Dr. Dhaliwal is a member of the UCSF Academy of Medical Educators and the UCSF Department of Medicine Council of Master Clinicians.

In 2012 he was profiled in the New York Times article entitled “Could A Computer Outthink This Doctor?”

From 2013-2018 he was a writer for the Wall Street Journal's The Experts Health Care Report.

He has been a podcast guest on Freakonomics M.D., The Wall Street Journal Report, and many medical podcasts.

He has received dozens of teaching awards, including the 2019 UCSF Osler Distinguished Teacher Award and the 2015 national Alpha Omega Alpha Robert J. Glaser Distinguished Teacher Award.

He has published over 160 articles and has been a visiting professor at over 50 universities across the U.S. and in China, Japan, Singapore, and Switzerland.
