

Adam Kingl

Author, Speaker, Educator, Adviser

With a career spanning an impressive range of industries including entertainment, consulting, and education, Adam Kingl has spent decades working in innovation, strategy, culture and leadership.

Adam is an adjunct faculty member at Ashridge-Hult International Business School and University College London School of Management. He is also an instructor at the Sauder School of Business at the University of British Columbia and Imperial College London. Previously, Adam was the Regional Managing Director for Duke Corporate Education in London, leading the organisation's business in Europe, and advising clients on issues of adaptability, performance, creativity, and purpose. Adam was also the Executive Director of Thought Leadership and Learning Solutions for London Business School (LBS) for a decade. He has been an associate of Saatchi & Saatchi and the Management Innovation eXchange in research, writing and development.

Adam is passionate about leadership for what's next and has authored a book on this topic, "Next Generation Leadership," (Harper Collins; February 2020).

Adam's keynote presentations are an illuminating conversation that not only inspire strategic innovation but also unleash creativity and unlock issues within organisational culture. He speaks with warmth and compassion on generational paradigms of work and leadership encouraging organisations to have different and better conversations, creating a simple and approachable path to transforming business success.

He contributes as a writer and expert interviewee to: The Financial Times, Sunday Times, Forbes, Fortune, The Guardian and Fast Company, among many others.

Adam holds degrees from London Business School, UCLA, and Yale. He is accredited by the British Psychological Society in personality and competency assessment. Adam was raised in Silicon Valley, California and now lives in Surrey, UK. He is a dual British-American citizen.

With a career spanning an impressive range of industries including entertainment, consulting, and education, Adam Kingl has spent decades working in innovation, strategy, culture and leadership.

Adam is an adjunct faculty member at Ashridge-Hult International Business School and University College London School of Management. He is also an instructor at the Sauder School of Business at the University of British Columbia and Imperial College London. Previously, Adam was the Regional Managing Director for Duke Corporate Education in London, leading the organisation's business in Europe, and advising clients on issues of adaptability, performance, creativity, and purpose. Adam was also the Executive Director of Thought Leadership and Learning Solutions for London Business School (LBS) for a decade. He has been an associate of Saatchi & Saatchi and the Management Innovation eXchange in research, writing and development.

Adam is passionate about leadership for what's next and has authored a book on this topic, "Next Generation Leadership," (Harper Collins; February 2020).

Adam's keynote presentations are an illuminating conversation that not only inspire strategic innovation but also unleash creativity and unlock issues within organisational culture. He speaks with warmth and compassion on generational paradigms of work and leadership encouraging organisations to have different and better conversations, creating a simple and approachable path to transforming business success.

He contributes as a writer and expert interviewee to: The Financial Times, Sunday Times, Forbes, Fortune, The Guardian and Fast Company, among many others.

Adam holds degrees from London Business School, UCLA, and Yale. He is accredited by the British Psychological Society in personality and competency assessment. Adam was raised in Silicon Valley, California and now lives in Surrey, UK. He is a dual British-American citizen.