

Morgan Housel

Partner, Collaborative Fund and Former Columnist, The Wall Street Journal and The Motley Fool

Morgan Housel, a New York Times best-selling author, financial expert, and partner at The Collaborative Fund since 2016.

His books, 'The Psychology of Money' and 'Same As Ever', have become global sensations, selling over six million copies and translated into more than 50 languages. Through his writing, Morgan has become one of the most influential voices in the world of finance, offering timeless insights into how human behavior shapes financial outcomes.

Housel's unique ability to translate complex financial concepts into engaging stories has earned him widespread recognition. His book, 'The Psychology of Money' delves into the emotional and psychological factors behind financial decisions, providing practical advice on how to build wealth and achieve financial security. His follow-up, 'Same As Ever,' continues his exploration of how we can navigate change and uncertainty in life and markets, reinforcing his reputation as a thought leader in behavioral finance.

Before joining The Collaborative Fund, Morgan spent over a decade as a financial journalist earning numerous accolades for his work. He previously worked as a columnist at The Motley Fool and a contributor to The Wall Street Journal. He is a two-time winner of the Best in Business Award from the Society of American Business Editors and Writers, and he received the prestigious New York Times Sidney Award. His contributions to the field of finance have also been recognized by MarketWatch, which named him one of the 50 most influential people in financial markets.

In addition to his work at The Collaborative Fund, Housel serves on the board of directors at Markel, a global investment holding company. He regularly speaks at conferences and events worldwide, where his engaging style and practical insights inspire individuals and organizations to rethink their approach to money, investing, and decision-making.