

Ryan Jenkins

Wall Street Journal Bestselling Author, Future of Work Expert, Advisor on Team Connection, Belonging, and Generational Dynamics

An internationally recognized thought-leader on leadership, mindset, and generational dynamics in the workplace, Ryan Jenkins is a trusted advisor helping organizations of all sizes in any industry build mission-led, high-performance teams through connection, communication, and purpose. Jenkins' insights have played a vital role in reshaping the DNA of some of the world's most admired companies and kickstarting future-focused workplace transformations designed to enhance individual achievement in support of collective success.

Jenkins leads a compelling conversation intended to ignite a fundamental shift in the ways leaders manage and communicate with their teams, as well as orient their organizations toward achieving their goals today, and tomorrow. In his uniquely memorable presentations, he draws from his own research and analysis of emerging workplace trends to provide audiences with actionable and customized strategies for working, communicating, and leading across generations; attracting, retaining, and engaging top talent with diversity and inclusion in mind; and strengthening team connection and workplace happiness to inspire industry-leading teams and equip them for the future of work. As a speaker, he has shared his forward-thinking, results-driven approaches to workplace innovation and redesign with top brands, including Coca-Cola, Salesforce, Wells Fargo, and John Deere.

In addition to being a cutting-edge workplace researcher and strategist, Jenkins is the Wall Street Journal bestselling author of Connectable: How Leaders Can Move Teams From Isolated to All In, The Generation Z Guide, and The Millennial Manual. He also shares proven methods for future-proofing organizations as a contributing author for Psychology Today, Inc., and Entrepreneur Magazine. Jenkins is the co-founder of LessLonely.com, the #1 resource for reducing worker isolation and strengthening team connections. And hosts The Case for Connection podcast.

Widely regarded as an influential voice in steering workplaces into the future, Jenkins is a Certified Speaking Professional, a premier designation bestowed upon only 12 percent of speakers worldwide. His top-ranked insights have been featured in Forbes, Fast Company, CNBC, and The Wall Street Journal. Showing an extreme focus on organizations' needs as they prepare for the future, he is sought after by teams looking to increase connection, productivity, and innovation – beginning by moving from isolated to “all in.”