

Lindsey Pollak

Career & Workplace Expert and New York Times Best-Selling Author

Recalculating: 5 Rules to Navigate Your Career Through the Changing World of Work. Imagine that moment when you're driving a car and you make a wrong turn or miss an exit. Your GPS will glitch for a few seconds and then a robotic voice will say: "Recalculating."

Every working adult on the planet is in our cars, hearing this voice, all at the exact same time. Even if it is not leading you to a major transition, you've likely spent the time making readjustments and pivots to keep up with the rapid pace of change in the world today. We are all Recalculators now.

Recalculating is no doubt a challenge—but it's also an opportunity. That is the message of New York Times bestselling author Lindsey Pollak's timely, inspirational and action-oriented presentation based on her brand new book, Recalculating.

With her signature combination of engaging storytelling, data-driven insights and immediately applicable advice, Lindsey will address such topics as:

- Adopting and maintaining a positive mindset
- Building a resilient personal brand
- Skilling and reskilling for the future
- Mastering the art of virtual communication
- Networking in the "new normal"

Attendees will leave this program with positive encouragement and clear steps to successfully recalculate and thrive in their own career and life journeys.

The Remix: How to Lead and Succeed in the Multigenerational Workplace. For the first time in history, five generations now share the workplace — the Traditional Traditionalists; Still-Booming Boomers; Xtra-Independent Gen Xers; the Tech-or-Die Gen Y/millennials, and the New-on-the-scene Gen Zs. Many organizations are trying to balance a generation gap of more than 50 years between the oldest and youngest employees. The diverse perspectives, motivations, and attitudes of these five generations have changed the dynamics of the workforce.

What if generational change is not a problem to overcome, but an opportunity to be optimized? Based on Lindsey Pollak's award-winning book of the same title, this presentation offers her latest insights into how to lead yourself and your organization in today's unprecedented multigenerational workplace. The millennial authority and often called a translator among generations, Lindsey will share her insights into how organizations across a wide variety of industries are changing the way they do business to better manage and leverage the unique skills and talents of each generation.

In this dynamic, engaging, action-oriented program, you will gain specific strategies to manage cross-generational challenges and turn multi-generational understanding into a competitive advantage. Attendees will:

- Understand the five distinct generations in today's workplace and how generational differences can affect people's workplace expectations and behaviors
- Explore common generational conflicts related to communication, feedback, flexibility, career pathing and more — and discover actionable tactics to resolve them
- Learn what benefits, training programs, managerial strategies and other tactics companies are using to improve retention of top young talent — without alienating other generations.
- Obtain actionable strategies to strengthen your own generational understanding and cross-generational relationships to build your own career success
- Harness the perspectives of all generations to drive innovation within your team and organization

Creating Tomorrow's Leaders: How to Attract, Retain, and Manage Millennial and Gen Z Talent. Millennials are now the largest generation in the U.S. workforce, and they are no longer "kids." Born 1981 to 1996, and also known as Generation Y, millennials are your current and future leaders, and they are bringing tremendous change, innovation, and opportunity. Drastically different than millennials, Gen Z, the most diverse generation in history, has now arrived and is entering the workplace.

In this essential program filled with up-to-the-minute data and case studies, New York Times best-selling author Lindsey Pollak helps you better understand your organization's younger generations and provides actionable strategies to harness their power and potential. Attendees will:

- Discover the key workplace preferences of millennials and Gen Z— and how to integrate these preferences with other generations' preferences.
- Hear about best practices at companies that are successfully attracting, engaging, and retaining top millennial and Gen Z talent.
- Learn tactical strategies for managing, engaging and training millennial and Gen Z employees.

Your Personal Brand: How to Lead, Succeed, and Stand Out in Today's Multigenerational Workplace. In this inspirational, engaging, and action-oriented presentation, Lindsey Pollak promotes the importance of developing a stellar professional brand for current and future business leaders. Her advice and anecdotes draw on original research, her own extensive experience, and interviews with successful professionals across a wide range of industries and experience levels. For maximum impact, Lindsey provides real-world, actionable tips to help attendees take immediate steps to apply her advice and rise in their own careers.

Attendees will:

- Build their personal brands, communication skills, and networking prowess
- Project the right professional image in person and online
- Avoid common mistakes of personal branding and career advancement.