

Reggie Selma

Former Senior Photojournalist

Leadership. As a former CNN photojournalist assigned to the White House, Reggie has traveled the world filming every U.S. president from Reagan to Obama. Reggie Selma has also filmed such iconic leaders as Nelson Mandela, Mother Teresa, and Pope John Paul II. With that rare front row seat to history, Reggie has witnessed leadership, and the wisdom it takes to govern a country, and inspire the world.

Perseverance. While growing up during the segregated Jim Crow south of Birmingham, Alabama, Reggie experienced first hand the injustice of sanctioned discrimination. But, with a loving, and supportive family, who taught him to believe in yourself you can overcome any obstacle. With that guidance, in 1982, Reggie went on to become CNN's first African- American cameraman assigned to the White House.

Inspiration. Reggie Selma has moved audiences all over the world. From Tokyo, to London, Amsterdam, Ireland, and the United States, with his stories of his childhood, the media, and family.
