

Alec Stewart OBE

Most Capped English Test Cricketer

With 118 international caps, Alec Stewart is the most capped English Test cricketer of all time. After 20 years in County and International cricket, his final match was a very high profile one at his home ground The Oval against South Africa in the summer of 2003.

Not only is Stewart an iconic sporting figure, but he is also a renowned corporate speaker. He works as a regular cricket analyst on BBC Radio 5Live and other broadcasters in various roles. Stewart also remains close to Surrey County Cricket Club as their Director of Cricket. He previously was a principle ambassador for Vodafone and their sponsorship with the English cricket team. He has also appeared on Sky 1's The Match and is widely recognised as a very talented footballer who could have had a career in the game.

As a regular pundit on cricket shows and a popular player for written and broadcast media, Stewart is very comfortable in front of the camera. He is also a natural speaker with confidence and considered delivery. His natural comic timing lends him perfectly to the after dinner circuit and his leadership credentials ensure his corporate speaking package, 'Leave Nothing To Chance', offers a useful and enlightening insight into focus, dedication and team motivation, amongst other aspects.
