

Michael K. Farr

CEO & Founder of Farr, Miller & Washington, LLC

Wallstreet, Washington and The World.

Everything has a price. Congressional decisions, international events, acts of terrorism, and even hurricanes drive the prices of stocks and bonds on Wall Street. It is a fascinating inter-connected global fabric that simultaneously creates billionaires and paupers. Michael tackles the complex issues and translates them into clear, everyday language in a style that is considered, entertaining, and informative.

Is the Trade Dispute with China the Next Cold War?

Forget the Politics. We Need Immigrants to Grow the US Economy. Period.

Wealth Disparity Has Social Implications But Can Cripple Economic Growth

Michael explains why half the world's wealth in the hands of just eight people can be a really bad thing economically.

Does a Trade War with China Make Sense?

It may not work, but not addressing the theft of technology and intellectual property makes far less sense.

President Trump's Attack of Fed Chairman Jay Powell Repeats Horrible Precedents.

Michael explains why a short term economic high could destroy a generation of wealth.
