

Patrick Murphy

32nd Under Secretary of the Army, America's First Iraq Veteran in Congress, Wharton Lecturer

The Common Traits of Impactful Leaders As a decorated combat veteran, military leader, and statesman, the Honorable Patrick J. Murphy has forged a reputation for navigating his teams toward mission success. Drawing from his own experiences leading in highly complex environments on the battlefield and in business, and collaborating with our nation's leaders, including President Barack Obama, Murphy outlines the common characteristics of leaders who consistently guide their organizations to success while contributing to the good of society. He shares hard-won lessons on leading through change, bringing the best of your people, and adopting a collective resilient mindset that will see your team through any challenge.

The Blueprint for Building a Purpose-Driven Organization Throughout his distinguished career serving our country as a combat veteran, legislator, and business leader, the Honorable Patrick J. Murphy has remained committed to building purpose-driven teams centered on creating positive change both within and outside of their organizations. In this talk, Murphy underpins the steps any organization can take to establish their purpose and create intentional strategies for aligning their operations to their purpose on the path to achieving their goals.
