Patrick Toomey

U.S. Senator (R-PA) 2011-2023; Ranking Member, Senate Banking Committee; Member, Finance Committee, Budget Committee, and Joint Economic Committee

The Politics of Business. From local mom-and-pop shops to international commerce giants, businesses at all levels will always be impacted by new bills and regulatory practices, and in turn, will impact the growth of the global economy. In this talk, former U.S. Senator and financial services industry leader, Pat Toomey, discusses the intricate relationship between business and politics, briefing audience members on the laws and regulations that will dictate how their businesses operate. With an eye toward the future, he provides expert insights and action steps for organizations as they navigate the evolving business landscape, using examples from his time as “a leading voice on money matters”, including government financial regulations, budgetary issues, tax and trade policy, cryptocurrency, and more.

Results Over Rhetoric: Working Together to Tackle Today’s Top Issues. As a productive and successful legislator during his 12 years in the U.S. Senate, former Senator Pat Toomey offers audiences with an insightful and experienced view of current hot-button political topics. In a candid conversation, he shares the issues that are at the center of discussions in Washington, D.C., how they are impacting us as a nation and our economic freedom, as well as their effect on our ability to lead on the global stage. Toomey addresses key financial regulations, and tax and trade policy issues, providing audience members with his unique insights and reminding them of the importance of country over party when it comes to putting pen to paper on legislation that advances our nation and has a positive influence in world affairs.