Safer: Turning Fear into Action. Why do we miss warning signs that seem obvious in hindsight? Why do we wait to act even when we sense something is wrong? Through candid stories from the White House Situation Room, the emergency room, and his own life, Dr. Raj Panjabi explores the psychology that can keep people and organizations from responding to threats before they become crises. Based on his forthcoming book, Safer, he shows audiences how to recognize risk more clearly, make decisions when the path forward is uncertain, and build the trust and connection that help people act together when it matters most.

Artificial intelligence and the Future of Healthcare. What if we could stop disease before it starts? Artificial intelligence and biology are converging to change how we discover therapies, detect disease earlier, and prevent illness before it takes hold. These advances could also change the economics of healthcare as chronic disease places growing pressure on health systems. As a physician at Harvard and Mass General Brigham and Senior Partner at Flagship Pioneering, where he helps build companies at the frontier of AI and life sciences, Dr. Panjabi has a firsthand view of what is coming next. In this keynote, he reveals how advances in AI and biotechnology could help us live healthier for more of our lives, while shifting more of healthcare from treating disease to anticipating and preventing it.

From Breakthrough to Follow Through: The Future of Healthcare Delivery The greatest breakthroughs in medicine mean little if they never reach the people who need them. Dr. Panjabi founded Last Mile Health at age 25 with a $6,000 wedding gift, growing it into a multimillion-dollar social enterprise recognized by Forbes as “a healthcare model for one billion people.” That experience is at the heart of this keynote about one of healthcare’s most urgent challenges: closing the distance between what medicine can do and who it actually reaches. Having built a model that brings care directly into communities, Dr. Panjabi reveals what it takes to move innovation beyond the walls of traditional health systems and into people’s lives. His experience offers healthcare leaders a new way to think about access, cost, and how the resources already around them can help better care reach more people.

How Leadership Can Transform Lives.
