Robert Costa

Chief Washington Analyst for CBS News, National Correspondent for CBS Sunday Morning

Power Centers: Inside the New Washington In a riveting, nonpartisan briefing that weaves up-to-the-minute reporting and deep insights, Emmy Award-winning journalist and best-selling author Robert Costa brings the power centers in the new Washington to life like no one else, with revealing stories on both parties and razor-sharp political analysis of what is possible on policy as Congress and the White House face-off on issue after issue. In addition, he offers an unparalleled assessment of the 2028 presidential race and its impact on policy.

The Battle: Inside Washington's economic war Emmy Award-winning journalist and best-selling author Robert Costa offers powerful and provocative nonpartisan insights into the ongoing political battle over the American economy, which is the defining issue of the new Washington and the 2028 presidential race. From taxes to artificial intelligence to federal spending, Costa goes deep on the key players and dynamics in the capital as well as in Silicon Valley and on Wall Street.

Leadership and Power: A reporter's notebook After two decades of interviewing presidents and the nation's most powerful elected officials, acclaimed reporter and author Robert Costa offers a series of nonpartisan, in-depth lessons on leadership and power gleaned from his high-profile interviews and behind-the-scenes moments with the people who have come to define our times.

A conversation with Robert Costa At age 41, Robert Costa has built an acclaimed reporting career that has taken him inside the highest levels of American politics from the White House to Congress to the campaign trail, and from senior roles at National Review magazine and The Washington Post to key broadcast positions at PBS and now the popular "Sunday Morning" on CBS. In a conversation with a moderator, he opens up about his journey and lessons learned along the way about leadership, character, history, and power.