

E.J. Dionne, Jr.

Washington Post Syndicated Columnist, Senior Fellow at The Brookings Institution, and Georgetown University Professor

National Politics With E.J. Dionne, Jr. E.J. Dionne is an award-winning journalist who writes a twice-weekly column about politics for the Washington Post. One of Washington's most enduring columnists, Dionne covers a variety of political topics spanning local and national elections, the state of journalism and the media, political party dynamics, Washington through a historical lense, and more. Always astute and referencing up-to-the-minute news, Dionne brings thoughtful analysis, insider stories, and future-focused commentary to any discussion about the state of American politics.