Kenneth Pollack

Vice President for Policy at the Middle East Institute

The Middle East With an extensive background in national security, intelligence, and foreign policy, Pollack is an expert on Middle Eastern political-military affairs, with a particular emphasis on Iraq, Iran, Saudi Arabia, and the other nations of the Persian Gulf region. As a senior fellow at the Saban Center for Middle East Policy at the Brookings Institution, Kenneth Pollack has also extensively worked on policy toward the region. He stresses economic, social, and educational change as part of the solution to the Middle East's issues. In his presentations, he addresses foreign affairs; foreign policy; geopolitics; the Middle East; America's relationship with the Middle East, including how our interests in the region will affect our policy; and how instability in the Middle East affects global security.

National Security and Intelligence With his extensive background in security and intelligence from his time at the CIA and the National Security Council, Pollack addresses security in the Middle East, how American foreign policy affects intelligence, and how instability in the region affects us at home and abroad.
